

Abstract

An ink formulation comprises a marking component and a metal salt that absorbs laser irradiation at 700-2000 nm and thereby causes the marking component to change colour. A copper salt in particular allows effective marking with a diode or CO<sub>2</sub> laser.